THE CHARGE OF THE COURT

J. Bonsal

THE CLERK: The Court will now charge the jury.

Spectators may leave at this time or remain seated until the completion of the charge.

Will you lock the door, please, Marshal?

THE COURT: Madam Forelady, as you are, Mrs.

Marcus, by virtue of occupying the first chair, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

I would like to join with the lawyers in thanking each of you for the care and attention that you have shown during this short trial and to tell you that I appreciate the sacrifices that I know that each of you has had to make in your own personal lives so you could serve in this very important capacity of being on a federal jury.

I know you will bear with me and give me the same attention that you have shown throughout the trial so that you may understand the principles of law which apply to this case.

Remember I told you at the time you were selected that it is the jury's duty to weigh the evidence here calmly and dispassionately without any sympathy or without any prejudice for or against either the Government or either of these defendants.

I told you that everyone appearing before this bar of justice is entitled to a fair and impartial trial and this is regardless of his occupation or his station in life.

I told you when you were selected that the subject matter here involved narcotic drugs and I mentioned that and I told you that that fact must not create any bias or prejudice in your minds, or prevent you from rendering an absolutely fair and impartial verdict.

Of course, as I told you, your verdict must be based solely on the testimony you heard from that witness chair and on the exhibits which were received in evidence and on nothing else at all.

Then I told you, if you will recall, that you, ladies and gentlemen, are the judges of the facts; that at the end of the trial I would instruct you as to the law and as to the law you must follow my instructions. It is not what the lawyers say the law is or what you may have read in another context or even what you may have heard from another judge; it is the instructions that I give you now.

Of course, as I said to you, you, the jury, are the sole judges of the facts. It is not what a lawyer may say a witness testified to or what he says the document contains or shows, nor what I might say on these subjects. It is what you, the jury, remember and decide.

I also told you when you were selected that you would observe me having conversations with one or the other of the lawyers during the trial. Indeed, I did.

I sustained objections and I overruled them.

I told you to pay no attention to all this.

This dealt with matters of law and housekeeping and whatnot.

Above all, ladies and gentlemen, draw no inferences from anything I may have said during this trial which might lead you to believe that I favor one side or the other here because, of course, I do not. That's not my prerogative. That is yours.

Now, throughout this charge, ladies and gentlemen, I will instruct you that you may not convict either of these defendants unless and until you were satisfied that the Government has proven each element comprising the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt.

Well, the words, of course, do suggest the answer. It is a doubt based on reason, a doubt which a reasonable man or woman might entertain, but a reasonable doubt is not a fanciful doubt, it is not an imagined doubt, it is not a doubt that a juror might conjure up to avoid performing an unpleasant task. It is a reasonable doubt. It is a doubt which arises in a juror's mind because of something in the evidence or the absence of evidence in the case. It is the kind of doubt which would cause a reasonable man or woman in a more serious and important matter in his or her life to hesitate to act.

The burden is on the Government to prove the guilt of a defendant beyond a reasonable doubt. The Government need not prove a defendant's guilt beyond all possible doubt, because after all if that were the rule, few people, however guilty they might be, would ever be convicted.

sible for one to be absolutely and completely convinced of any controverted fact which by its nature is not susceptible to mathematical precision or to mathematical certainty.

So the law is that the Government must prove the guilt of a defendant beyond a reasonable doubt; not beyond all possible doubt.

Now, when I reviewed the indictment with you I told you also when you were selected that the indictment is merely the way by which the Government calls individuals

rg:mg 5

2 3

told you that the indictment is not evidence of the guilt

of a defendant and the indictment does not detract in into court who it claims had violated the law, and I

the law surrounds a defendant until his guilt is proven.

of these defendants throughout the trial and applies to the consideration of each of the essential elements of the crimes charged.

This presumption of innocence remains unless and until the jury should find that the Government has proved the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt.

Each of these defendants has pled not guilty here and by doing so he has put in issue every material element of the indictment.

This burden has remained on the Government throughout the trial and if the Government has not proved to you that the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, then, of course, it is your duty to find that defendant not guilty.

There are two defendants here, Mr. Swiderski and Miss De Los Santos.

They are charged here as two individuals and the guilt of each of them must be passed upon by you separately because guilt or innocence is a personal thing and each of these defendants has the right to the same consideration on your part as if he or she were being tried alone.

Now, the indictment here has two counts in it and I repeat, the indictment is merely the charge.

The first count charges both of the defendants with possession with intent to distribute of a controlled substance, namely, cocaine in this case, and the second count charges Miss De Los Santos alone with possession with intent to distribute of a controlled substance, marijuana.

I mentioned to you each of these counts must be considered by you separately and the first count must be considered by you separately as to each of the defendants.

The fact that you may find the defendant guilty or not guilty on one count of the indictment does not control your verdict on the other.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, this has been a short trial. The lawyers have summed up to you in some detail this morning and I don't intend to review the evidence here because, as I mentioned to you, it is your recollection which controls.

What the lawyers say or what I say is not

7 8

rg:mg 7
evidence.

I may mention briefly what I understand to be some of the contentions here. I don't pretend that they are complete. All I am doing this for is in the hope that it may help you refresh your own recollections, which is, after all, the thing that controls.

Now, as I understand it, the Government is contending here that on June 3, 1975, each of the defendants, Swiderski and Miss De Los Santos, possessed with intent to distribute 21.5 grams of cocaine. That is count 1.

In count 2, the Government contends that on that same day Miss De Los Santos possessed with intent to distribute 7.6 grams of marijuana and that in both counts this was in violation of federal law.

As I recall it, the Government contends that Swiderski was in contact with a paid Government informer, Martin Charles Davis, on or about May 31, 1975 and that Davis arranged for Swiderski to meet with one fellow, I think he was called Carlton Bush, who would sell the cocaine to Swiderski.

Then on June 3, 1975, Swiderski and Miss De Los Santos went with Davis and met one Carlton Bush somewhere on West 48th Street, I think the apartment was, and worked out the purchase of four ounces of cocaine.

As I recall it the Government contends that the evidence shows that both the defendants tested and snorted the cocaine and then the arrangements were made to purchase one ounce, I think for $1250, and that they would meet again at 6:00 p.m. to arrange the sale of an additional three ounces.

After the meeting in the hotel, as I understand, while Swiderski was driving this van, at both of the defendants were arrested on 34th Street and 6th Avenue, I believe, and that when they were arrested the cocaine and the marijuana were found in a pocketbook in the van belonging to Miss De Los Santos.

Now, of course, each of the defendants deny these Government contentions. The defendant Swiderski, as I understand it, contends that if he had purchased this cocaine on June 3, 1975, that he was entrapped, I think was the word the lawyer used, into making this purchase by the activity of Davis, the Government informer, and that he had no intention of distributing the cocaine.

Miss De Los Santos denies the Government's contention. I think she said she was just along, she didn't know what was going on. She was in town, she had some money because they were buying things at the boutique show and she denies that she participated in these transactions. I think she did testify to something about sniffing, that's the word, but that was for her own use, that had nothing to do with the sale.

Now, the statute involved here, ladies and gentlemen, is Section 841(a) of Title 21 of United States Code which provides to the extent here relevant: It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly or intentionally to possess with intent to distribute a controlled substance.

Well, you want to ask first what is a controlled substance. You heard in this case, and you heard the Government chemist testify that this was cocaine and the marijuana.

If you find that the substance here was cocaine and marijuana, they are controlled substances as used in the statute.

Now, as I mentioned to you, ladies and gentlemen, the indictment contains two counts, the first one naming both defendants and the second one naming only Miss De Los Santos, and you will return a separate verdict with respect to each count and with respect to each defendant.

The first count of the indictment reads as follows:

"The grand jury charges:

"On or about the third day of June, 1975, in

1 | rg:mg 10

the Southern District of New York" -- and these events you have heard about, 48th Street, he Chelsea Hotel, these places you heard about were all in the Southern District of New York -- "Walter Swiderski and Maritza

De Los Santos, the defendants, unlawfully, intentionally and knowingly did possess with intent to distribute a Schedule II narcotic drug controlled substance, to wit, 21.5 grams of cocaine hydrochloride."

Then count 2, which is the marijuana count, reads:

"On or about the third day of June, 1975, in the Southern District of New York, Maritza De Los Santos, the defendant, unlawfully, intentionally and knowingly did possess with intent to distribute a Schedule I narcotic drug controlled substance, to wit, 7.6 grams of marijuana."

Then it says in parentheses here something which I don't understand, it says (cannabis sativa L.)

I suppose if any of you are chemists that might mean something to you, but it doesn't mean anything to me.

So you can see, ladies and gentlemen, from a reading of the indictment, that the Government contends that the defendants Swiderski and L. Los Santos unlawfully, knowingly, and intentionally possessed on June 3rd with intent to distribute the cocaine and that Miss De Los Santos unlawfully, knowingly and intentionally possessed with intent to distribute the marijuana.

rg:mg 11

Now, you recall the statute speaks about possession with intent to distribute. What does that mean?

Well, the law recognizes two types of possession; one we call actual possession and one we call constructive possession.

Actual possession means if you have something in your hand or something in your pocket or if you have something in your purse, or if you have something in your apartment, those are examples of actual possession.

Constructive possession means when you may not have the article in your hand, but you have control of it; you may have given it to somebody else for safekeeping or you may know where it is and you think you have control over the disposition of whatever the substance is.

Now turning to what "possess with intent to distribute" means. What does that mean? Well, intent to distribute merely means that you intend at some point at a later time to pass all or some of it on. It could mean a sale. It could mean you could give it away. You could give it to a friend of yours or even to your fiancee. If you are going to do that, that is a distribution.

Now turning back to the indictment, ladies and gentlemen, in order to convict the defendant, and I have told you to consider each of them separately, in order to convict the defendant you are considering, the Covernment must prove the following elements:

1. That the defendant you are considering possessed with intent to distribute the cocaine and of course in count 2 that the defendant, Miss De Los Santos, possessed with intent to distribute the marijuana.

I have been over possession and attempt to distribute with you. That is the first element.

The second element is that the defendant you are considering was acting wilfully, knowingly and unlawfully. All that means is that the defendant you are considering knew what he or she was doing, knew that he or she was in possession of a narcotic drug in violation of the law with intent to distribute.

Three, that the substance possessed was cocaine in count 1 and marijuana in count 2.

Here again you have heard the chemist's testimony and I haven't heard any contradiction of that so, I think, as far as I recall the evidence, the substance has been shown to be cocaine and marijuana.

12

13 14

15

16

17

18

19

Now, the Government is contending here that the package containing the cocaine, which is Exhibit 3A, as I recall it, was on this occasion on 48th Street purchased by defendant Swiderski from Carlton Bush. As I recall, the Government is contending, based on Davis' testimony, that the package was turned over to Swiderski and he placed it in his pants pocket.

The defendants deny that. I think the defendants did, in their testimony, indicate that somebody had placed Exhibit 3A in Miss De Los Santos! pocketbook, but regardless of which of these versions is true, there seems to be no doubt that the package was found at the time the defendants were arrested on 34th Street and 6th Avenue.

Now, with regard to count 1, the cocaine count, you may ask yourselves what did Miss De Los Santos have to do with it, if anything?

Her defense is she had nothing to do with it. She was just there.

As I recall the testimony, all of the negotiations were carried on by Mr. Swiderski and you may ask yourselves why is Miss De Los Santos involved at all.

Well, here the Government is contending that Miss De Los Santos aided and abetted Swiderski in effecting

rg:mg 14

Section 2(A) of Title 18 of the United States Code which the purchase and this brings into play another statute, provides in relevant part that whoever commits an offense against the United States or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission is punishable as

Ŭ

All that means is that if one helps somebody else to commit a crime, that person is equally liable as an aider and abettor in that crime and the Government here contends that the evidence shows that at the apartment on 48th Street Miss De Los Santos did aid and abet her fiance in acquiring the cocaine.

But here before you can find Miss De Los Santos.

guilty of aiding and abetting, the Government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that she knowingly aided, abet ted and assisted Swiderski in purchasing the cocaine.

Now, here it is immaterial that they were fiancees and it is not enough if the Government has shown that Miss De Los Santos acquiesced in what was going on. Mere presence there would not be sufficient to find that she was aiding and abetting Swiderski.

Here to find Miss De Los Santos guilty you must find that she knowingly and willingly participated in the purchase of the cocaine; that she sought in some way to gain from her participation or that she had an interest in the The interest could be financial, it could be outcome. a relationship between two people, it doesn't matter what the interest is; did she want to help Swiderski, and here you can consider what happened.

I think there was evidence about the testing, the bleach test and all that kind of thing that went on. So consider that evidence and find out whether the Government has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Miss De Los Santos did aid and abet Swiderski in the purchase of the cocaine.

Then as far as Swiderski is concerned, you heard his lawyer this morning contend that he was entrapped into making this purchase by the activity of Davis, the paid Government informant.

Now, the defense of entrapment is available to Mr. Swiderski if you find that he was induced or enticed to commit the crime here which he would not otherwise have committed.

If Davis' role was to afford Swiderski the opportunity to buy cocaine, that is not entrapment. Here Swiderski must establish that the idea of purchasing the cocaine originated with Davis and not with him.

He must show that he had no previous disposition, intent or purpose to possess or to distribute the cocaine; that it was Davis that implanted in his mind, as an innocent person, the disposition to commit the crime of purchasing the cocaine.

In considering the defense of entrapment, ladies and gentlemen, remember that the narcotics business, and I think the evidence here indicates that, to a certain extent, the narcotics business is one which is filled with concealment and guilt, and to apprehend violators under the narcotics laws the Government must employ various strategems, including the use of paid informers and undercover agents.

You can understand that if policemen went out with their badges and uniforms and said, "We are looking for narcotics violators," they probably would not catch anybody. So in considering whether the defendant Swiderski has the defense of entrapment here, consider all of the evidence offered by the Government and by him, and this would include prior conversations between Swiderski and Davis relative to narcotics; conversations as to price and quality, evidence as to understandings to make future narcotics deals. And after you have considered this evidence determine whether the defendant Swiderski has established here that he would not have purchased the cocaine on June 3 except for Davis' enticement, inducements, or blandishments, if you will, and if you find that Swiderski has shown that, ladies and gentlemen, then the Government in addition to the elements I reviewed with you a minute ago must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant Swiderski was ready and willing to make the purchase on June 3 and that Davis merely afforded him the opportunity to do so. And if you find that the Government has not proved this beyond a reasonable doubt, then you would find the defendant Swiderski not guilty.

But, on the other hand, if you find that the Government has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Swiderski did knowingly, wilfully and unlawfully purchase the cocaine and that Davis merely gave him the opportunity to do it, then you may find the defendant guilty.

Now, you can see from all this, ladies and gentlemen, that one of the crucial elements here is the knowledge and intent of the defendant you are considering.

You must find that the defendant you are considering had criminal intent to violate the narcotics laws by possessing a narcotic drug with intent to distribute it.

How do you determine that? How do you determine whether the defendant was acting wilfully, knowingly, unlawfully and indeed had this criminal intent?

Well, an act is done knowingly and wilfully if it is done voluntarily and purposefully. An act is done wilfully, knowingly and unlawfully if it is done with an evil motive or purpose, such as to violate the narcotics laws.

But an act is not done wilfully, knowingly or unlawfully if it is done by mistake, carelessness or other innocent reason.

Obviously it is impossible to prove exactly what the defendant you are considering knew or what his or her intentions were on these occasions, because, after all, we can't look into a person's mind and see what knowledge he or she has in order to determine his or her specific intention. But these are matters which you, the jury, can determine after taking careful consideration of the facts and circumstances brought out in the evidence.

The knowledge and intentions, the wilfullness, if you will, may only be understood when put in context with the circumstances surrounding a person's acts and the inferences which you, the jury, find may be reasonably drawn therefrom.

You might ask yourself whether these transactions were normal or whether you think they were abnormal; whether they were open or whether they were surreptitious; whether you believe that the background of the defendant made it likely or unlikely that he or she fully understood what he or she was doing; whether you think the defendant had a motive, whether he or she had a financial or other interest in the outcome and these are the kinds of questions, ladies and gentlemen -- of course, not the only ones -- which you should ask yourselves in order to determine the knowledge and intentions of the defendant you are considering.

I don't suggest any answers to these questions because after all in your own daily lives you are called upon to use your own common sense and experience to determine from the actions or statements of others what their real intentions and purposes are, and please do that here with respect to each of these defendants.

Now, you will recall, I think it was Davis, testified that he had had prior conversations with the defendant Swiderski regarding narcotics transactions and about price and quality and that kind of thing.

Now, he is not charged with any crimes except the ones that I have reviewed with you and these conversations occurred before that, so you will consider this evidence as to these prior conversations only in considering what you find the defendant Swiderski's knowledge and intentions were at the time of the transactions charged in this indictment.

Then another point, ladies and gentlemen, which

rg:mg 20

you might consider on this issue of knowledge and intent:
Here the Government contends that when the police officers approached 34th Street and 6th Avenue, that the defendant Swiderski was driving the van, banged into the police cars in front and in back and the Government contends that this indicated that Swiderski was trying to flee.

Swiderski denies this. He says, on the contrary,
I saw these people with guns and I was scared to death.
I thought I was being held up or something.

so consider the evidence here, ladies and gentlemen, and if you find on the basis of the evidence that Swiderski was trying to escape the police, then you may consider that as circumstantial evidence from which you may infer-- you don't have to, but you may infer that the defendant knew that he was in trouble because of narcotics. In other words, consciousness of guilt.

But of course this evidence about the banging of the cars you can consider only with respect to Mr. Swiderski and not with respect to Miss De Los Santos.

The law recognizes two types of evidence, ladies and gentlemen: direct evidence and circumstantial evidence.

Direct evidence is the kind of thing you hear from that witness, where a witness tells you what he observed, what he did.

from which the jury may infer by a process of reasoning certain facts which are sought to be established as true. For example, circumstantial evidence is when you go home on a rainy day and you go in your apartment, somebody is looking at the television and they look at your hat and coat and they say, "Gee, it is raining outside."

Well, they haven't looked outside, they have looked at you and they say, "Your coat and hat are wet" and by a process of reasoning they figure it is raining outside.

There's circumstantial evidence in this case, too, that you have heard about.

Both direct and circumstantial evidence are good evidence and no greater degree of weight is required whether it is circumstantial or direct. But in any event, based on all the evidence, you must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendant you are considering.

Of course, different inferences may be drawn from the evidence, whether it is direct or circumstantial. The banging up of the police cars is a case in point. That's circumstantial evidence. Here the Government asks you to infer flight, running away. The defendant asks you to infer no, he was just being scared to death, he thought he was being attacked. But it is for you, the jury, alone, to determine what inferences you draw from the evidence and what facts you find to have been proven.

During the trial, ladies and gentlemen, and I want you to remember this. I have told you to compartmentalize the defendants here and consider them separately. Consider also only the evidence that you recall relating to that defendant, not evidence that might have affected the other defendant.

I mention this because again all of these Davis conersations and telephone calls and activities with Swiderski prior to June 3, that kind of evidence, Swiderski is the only one involved. I think Miss De Los Santos' only connection is that she might have been at some of the meetings with him, but you are to consider that evidence of these considerations and negotiations, if any, that took place only with respect to Mr. Swiderski, not with respect to Miss De Los Santos.

There may have been other instances during the trial — and the point I am trying to make is you don't have any spill-over between the evidence with respect to one defendant spilling over on the other defendant where the other defendant was not involved.

Now, you, the jury, of course, are the exclusive judges of the credibility of the witnesses who appeared before you. I observed you giving them all careful attention.

rg:mg 23

You will subject the testimony of all of these witnesses to the same standards, whether they were Government witnesses or defense witnesses.

Of course, it isn't the number of witnesses. It is the quality of the testimony, the testimony that you, the jury, think most likely represented the true picture of what happened.

How do you determine the credibility of these witnesses?

Well, you saw them. How did they impress you? Did you think theywere testifying frankly, candidly and fairly?

So here again, ladies and gentlemen, apply your common sense and experience just as you do in determining an important matter in your own lives when you are called upon to decide whether you had been given a true picture of a given situation.

I think you would consider a witness' demeanor, you would take into account the witness' background, occupation or business, you consider a witness' candor or lack of it, the witness' possible bias, his or her means of information and the accuracy of the witness' recollection.

.9

And you consider whether you find the witness' testimony supported or whether you find it contradicted by other testimony which you find to be credible or by other circumstances. You consider whether a witness has an interest in the case.

Now, as I recall it, we had a couple of New York

Policemen testify in here and they are law enforcement of ficers. They have an interest as such in prosecuting people whom they believe to have violated the law.

That's an interest that you can consider.

Now, each of the defendants testified here. They testified voluntarily. They didn't have to testify. They did that voluntarily. Obviously they have an extremely important interest here in testifying and that is a factor, their interest you may consider.

Of course, this doesn't mean that a witness will falsify or shade his testimony because he has an interest, it was merely a factor for you, the jury, to consider in determining the witness' credibility.

A witness may be discredited if youfind that he made statements at other times which are inconsistent with his present testimony. He may be discredited if you make up your mind the witness is lying or misleading you and if you find that a witness lied or was misleading you, you reject all of that witness' testimony if you want, or, if you find part of it reliable, you can accept that part of it and reject the rest.

You will have the right to see any of the exhibits which have been received in evidence. If you desire to see them just let the marshal know.

As you deliberate, ladies and gentlemen, just remember that a jury deliberation is one in which everybody expresses their views and exchanges views.

Please don't be afraid to change your original view if after talking to your fellow jurors you become convinced that your original view is wrong.

never surrender your honest conviction in the case. If you have a honest conviction, never surrender that because you are outvoted.

You will seek to arrive at a verdict here providing that you can do so consistently with the conscientious convictions of each and every one of you.

Now, it is obviously extremely important here to both the Government and to each of the defendants that this case be decided by you. This being a criminal case your verdict must be a unanimous verdict, a verdict reflecting the conscientious convictions of all twelve of you.

If after reviewing the evidence, ladies and gentlemen, you find that the defendant you are considering is not guilty, you must not hesitate for any reason to return a verdict of not guilty; but, if on the other hand, you find that the law has been violated by the defendant you are considering, you must not hesitate to render a verdict of guilty because of sympathy or any other reason at all.

Please don't consider the possibility of punishment in case you find a defendant guilty. This rests with the Court. It is of no concern of yours and must not enter into your deliberations in any way. You must not allow consideration of the possibility of punishment to affect you or make you seek to avoid the performance of an unpleasant task.

Finally, ladies and gentlemen, I am sure that if you listen to the views of your fellow jurors and if you apply your common sense here that you will reach a fair verdict and I remind you that that verdict must be rendered without fear, without favor, without prejudice and without sympathy.

Will the attorneys come forward a minute, please?

MR. LIPSON: Your Honor, I have several objections which I would like to note for the record.

I object to your Honor's use of the example of fiance in the description of a person on whom an intent might be made.

THE COURT: I couldn't get away from the evidence on that.

What's next?

MR. LIPSON: Your Honor, I think in discussing entrapment I think you placed too heavy a burden on the defendant.

THE COURT: You have an exception on that, too.

MR. LIPSON: I also object to your Honor's statement that in order to show predisposition the Government must merely show that he had a prior intent to possess or distribute. I think the Government would have to show a prior intent to possess with the intention of distributing.

THE COURT: I will give you an exception on that.

MR. LIPSON: Your Honor made reference to the prior conversations between the defendant Swiderski and Marty Davis upon which the Government is relying to establish predisposition.

I think your Honor gave a weighted presentation with respect to that and I object to it.

THE COURT: I am sure you think so but you have an exception on that.

I tried to be fair to you.

MR. LIPSON: With respect to the question of the attempted escape, the issue before the jury is not whether he was trying to escape, but whether he knew that the people from whom he was escaping were police officers.

THE COURT: Oh, no, you have an exception on that, too. Your point is purely one of credibility.

All right.

MR. LIPSON: I also object to your Honor's citing as an example of circumstantial evidence the alleged es-I think in the context of the case it is weighted cape. in the Government's favor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. LIPSON: I also object to your Honor's reference to phone conversations and negotiations.

I think the term you used was between Marty Davis and the defendant Walter Swiderski.

THE COURT: All right, you have an exception on that.

What do you have?

MR. WASSERSTEIN: Yes, your Honor. Exception to your Honor's mention in recalling part of the facts with respect to Maritza De Los Santos, you mentioned she might have attended some of the meetings.

I think the evidence will reflect --

THE COURT: Their recollection controls on that.

MR. WASSERSTEIN: I think the evidence shows that she attended none of the meetings.

THE COURT: I said their recollection controls.

MR. WASSERSTEIN: I would join in all of the exceptions that my colleague took and make particular mention of the term of "fiancee" with respect to any distribution.

THE COURT: You fellows used that. It started out girl friend and you fellows told me fiancee was more delicate so I followed you.

MR. WASSERSTEIN: Your Honor, I would also except to your Honor's failure to include in the charge some sort or corrective language on the question of threats.

THE COURT: We discussed that yesterday and I thought and still think it was best not to discuss threats because I think at this point --

MR. WASSERSTEIN: Could I ask your Honor whether you would consider two brief additions? One is that the informer per se is an interested witness and the other is that prior to the application of 2A, the aiding and abetting,

MR. WASSERSTEIN: Before 2A, aiding and abetting comes into play, the jury must first find that a crime has been committed before they can consider aiding and abetting.

MR. BATCHELDER: That is not true, your Honor.

THE COURT: I will tell them about an interested witness.

Have you anything?

MR. BATCHELDER: I object to the interested witness. There is no showing. You covered it generally.

MR. LIPSON: Your Honor, may I join in my colleague's exceptions?

THE COURT: Yes.

(In open court)

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, remember I told you you would consider the interest a person might have and I referred to the witnesses and to the defendants.

But it occurred to me you might also think about whether Mr. Davis had an interest in testifying so I just add that to the others whose interest you might consider.

Your verdict here, of course, on the first count, you will consider each of the defendants separately,

1 rg:mg 31 Mr. Swiderski and Miss De Los Santos, and you will reach 2 a verdict of guilty or not guilty as to each of them, and 3 on the second count, you will reach a verdict of guilty or not guilty only with respect to Miss De Los Santos. 5 All right. 7 (Alternate jurors excused) 8 (Marshal was duly sworn) THE COURT: All right, ladies and gentlemen, you may retire and I hope your lunches arrive soon if they 10 haven't already arrived. 11 12 Thank you very much. 13 (At 12:40 p.m., the jury adjourned to the jury 14 room to deliberate upon their verdict) THE COURT: Gentlemen, I think if we get back by 15 a quarter of two, that will be all right. 16 17 (Luncheon recess) 18 19 20 21 22 23

You say you find the defendant Walter Swiderski guilty on the first count, Maritza De Los Santos guilty on the first and second count.

(Each juror, upon being asked: "Is that your verdict?" answered in the affirmative.)

THE CLERK: The jury stands polled.

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, you know, I never comment on a jury verdict because as I tried to say to you in my charge before lunch, in my mind the jury verdict is a very sacred thing indeed because it represents the conscientious conviction of twelve representative citizens, so I never comment on a jury verdict and I don't think anybody else has any right to either, but I do want to say again how grateful I am to all of you for the care and attention that you gave during this trial and tell you how much I appreciate that. I find that to be a great tribute to the jury system. I just want to thank you for it, ladies and gentlemen.

THE CLERK: The jurors are excused for the term.

THE COURT: Good luck to all of you.

defendant Swiderski I would move to set aside the verdict and for the Court to enter a verdict of acquittal on the grounds that the verdict is unsupported by the evidence.

THE COURT: I am going to deny that.

I'll tell you what I will do. I am going to fix a day of sentence and if either of you gentlemen would like to make a motion on paper, on a time schedule, I will give the Government five days to answer them. I will be glad to have you do that if you want to do it.

MR. LIPSON: Your Honor, I would like that op-

THE COURT: I will give you the opportunity to do that, but it seems to me that the way it looks to me now the issues were fairly presented and it was within the province of the jury to find what they did and I will give you that opportunity, too, sir.

MR. WASSERSTEIN: I would join in my colleague's position. I would just note for the record that it is ten minutes after two. I understand that the jury had a verdict some 15 minutes to two and that your Honor's charge was completed about one o'clock.

THE COURT: Well, that's all right.

OK, gentlemen, what about a date for sentence?

I would like to have pre-sentence reports with regard to both defendants. I think it is going to take about six weeks for the Probation Department to complete their report.

Would Monday, December 8, be agreeable to counsel?

MR. LIPSON: Your Honor, that's agreeable to me.

THE COURT: I would like to do it at about 9:30 in the morning.

MR. LIPSON: Does your Honor know where you will be sitting?

THE COURT: Yes, in Roo, 2804. That will be on the 28th floor of this building, 2804.

I would like to say to the defendants, I would be grateful if you cooperate with the Probation Department. I would like to know all that is going for you as well as what I heard during the course of the trial. I would be grateful if you would do that and I would also be grateful, Mr. Lipson and Mr. Wasserstein, if you would accompany the defendants to the Probation Department when they leave so they can start on their report.

MR. POTTER: Your Honor, I am at a disadvantage not being fully aware of the file, but I do not know the bail status of the defendants.

Could I ask what is the bail status of the defendants?

THE CLERK: $1500 for Mr. Swiderski.

• MR. WASSERSTEIN: And Miss De Los Santos is out on her own recognizance.

MR. POTTER: Your Honor, I move the defendants be remanded under the circumstances.

THE COURT: I am not prepared to do that. I realize that you are at a disadvantage, Mr. Potter.

Mr. Swiderski, where are you living, sir?

DEFENDANT SWIDERSKI: At 55 Ward Street, Clifton,
New Jersey.

THE COURT: Who are you living with?

DEFENDANT SWIDERSKI: With my fiancee, Maritza

De Los Santos.

THE COURT: Anybody else?

DEFENDANT SWIDERSKI: Just the two of us. We are going to be married on Saturday.

THE COURT: Do you have a telephone there?
